SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 11.
REPUBLICAN TICKET.
Election, Tuesday, November 2, 1886.
STATE TICKET.
For Governor—JEREMIAH DUNN, of Vernon.
For Lieutenant Governor—GEORGE W. RYLAND, of Grant.
For Secretary of State—E. G. TIMME, of Kenosha.
For State Treasurer—J. D. BANSBACH, of Winnebago.
For Attorney General—CHAS. E. STANBROOK, of Manitowish.
For Railroad Commissioner—ATLEY TETTERSON, of Crawford.
For State Superintendent—J. B. TUBB, of Pierce.
For Insurance Commissioner—PHIL CHASE, JR., of Shawano.

The Hon. Thomas Moonlight, the democratic nominee for the governorship of Kansas, calmly ignores the fact that many years ago he referred to the democrats as "the scum and dregs of the Missouri river bottoms." It will be a very fine democratic campaign for the democratic nominee for governor. Kansas doesn't like a hypocrite. That is the reason it defeated St. John for governor.

St. John, the alleged temperance worker, is a prohibitionist for revenue only. General Neal Dow told the Boston Journal the other day that St. John paid $50 a night for his speeches in Maine, and that he refused to speak in Augusta because the money could not be raised to pay him in advance. The Boston Herald, a friendly newspaper, in its report of St. John's speech at Manchester, N.H., says: "He was bitter on Blaine and Frye, occasionally touching on temperance issues as presented in the prohibition platform." This pleases the democrats of Maine. What they want St. John to say a good deal about Blaine and the republican party, but only "occasionally" to refer to temperance.

The following strange circumstance is being told in the east. Soon after the great earthquake in New England in 1727, the Rev. Josiah Smith, who was then pastor of the Dissenting Church, at Oshkosh, a village near Charleston, S.C., preached a sermon in Charleston, with the earthquake as his text, some sentences of which, when read in connection with the recent occurrences in the south, have an odd sound. "The God" he said, "who shook New England with equal ease make Carolina tremble." Other sentences of this discourse, which was printed in Boston in 1730, were as follows:

We are, perhaps, greater sinners than they. Though justice has smote them and spared us, our crimes might be more numerous than theirs and our state more dangerous. It may be, God reserves us for severer rebukes of his anger. There is, doubtless, enough in our nature for an earthquake in Carolina. We know not what vast subterranean caverns we stand over and what store of nitrous sulphurous particles are lodged below us; to fulfill their destiny will upon us word or touch. The earthquake which shook New England had almost reached Carolina, or rather, been felt in the more distant parts and skirts of the province; and very probably, by comparing times, Charleston heard its roar; what sparring money that we only heard it.

The prophecy was slow but sure, in being fulfilled, and after a lapse of more than 150 years there came that calamity which was far more terrible than the minister dare foretell.

"THE CHURCH IN PRACTICAL POLITICS."
Under the foregoing headline the Milwaukee Sentinel prints the following editorial which in spirit and matter is worthy the attention of all temperance people:

The prohibition party in this state is a political party with a political platform and a political ticket. The party candidate for governor is M. Olin, a politician. The first campaign meeting of this party at Oshkosh was held in the First Methodist church, at which candidate Olin made his first stump speech. It will be regarded as a very extraordinary event that a political campaign should open in a church.

This political meeting was opened by the pastor of the church, the platform being occupied by several politicians, including the candidate for governor. The stump speech of the evening. It must occur to Methodists who have not their judgment, that this is a proceeding that cannot be defended. The First Methodist church at Oshkosh is an institution dedicated to a religious and religious cause, and is exempt from taxation entirely because of its non-political and religious character. The prohibition party is a political party aiming, ostensibly, to gain control of the government of the state. It is an absolutely a political party, though nominally insignificant, as the republican or democratic party. When it is given the use of the unadorned church, including the pastor, the church becomes a political arena for a society and for the utterance of its political views.

If the Methodist church may thus go into active politics to secure one particular end, it may go on to secure other ends in legislation; and thus it becomes a menace to society as an organized force. If the Methodists may give their organized influence to particular legislative ends, the Catholic church may do the same for other legislative ends. The churchman in politics are very different things and it is to be hoped the reasonable people of Mr. Wilson's charge, whether they are Catholics or not, will not protest against this inauguration of a policy that will injure the church to no small degree.

There is a good deal of food for serious reflection in the foregoing editorial. When a church goes into politics, it loses much of its power for good. It can not take an active part in promoting the selfish ends of political demagogues and at the same time stand for all that is tender, pure and hallowed in religion. It can not transform itself into a political party without losing the respect and confidence of very many of its best members. It can not open its doors to political bargains without endangering antagonism and loss of respect and confidence in the study of a curious phase of mental

It can not enter into political strife and at the same time carry with it the spirit of the Master; neither can it join in the scramble for office and keep itself unspotted from this world. One redeeming feature connected with this political-chaos of business is that the great mass of church members have no sympathy for the movement. They think there is a better way to promote the cause of temperance, which is by non-partisan work.

Many of the ministers and laymen of Massachusetts have the correct idea of the manner of promoting the temperance cause, and in this they are making considerable headway. A call signed by well known men as ex-Governor William Claflin, the Rev. Dr. Daniel Doremus, B. K. Pierce, editor of Zion's Herald, H. E. Faxon and a dozen others, has been issued for a mass meeting to be held in Worcester on the 10th of this month, the object of the movement being to "secure a better enforcement of the laws against the liquor saloons," and "to obtain legal provision for the entire suppression of the traffic in alcoholic liquors as beverages." Although republicans, as over, are leading this crusade against rum, Governor Robinson being expected to speak at Worcester, the movement is non-partisan in character, democrats as well as republicans being urged to take up the cause and to keep it independent of party lines. The views of two of the leaders in the movement on this point are given in the Boston correspondence of the Springfield Republican as of interest:

The Rev. Dr. Daniel Doremus, who lives now in Chelsea, and is the most thorough statesman in the state on temperance, is strongly opposed to the third party movement of the prohibitionists. He loves the prohibition cause better than he does the republican party, so he told me to-day, but he will never go out of the republican party to become a third party prohibitionist. He believes that the cause of temperance is greatly injured by this form of political activity. What he would like would be to see the cause carried forward by the best men of both parties. Henry H. Faxon, of Quincy, is another prohibitionist republican who does not propose to leave the party.

The end sought by these Massachusetts temperance men is to persuade the legislature to submit to the people an amendment to the constitution in favor of prohibition. The end sought by the temperance men of Wisconsin should be akin to that of their brethren in Massachusetts; and in the meantime to work for a local option law for present advantage. There is sense in this method of work but not sense in failure in the third party movement.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Economies for the people—The Story of the Harpers—George Eliot and Her Heroes—A Victorious Defeat—The Labor Question—The American Salmon Fisherman—Economics for the People is a small book recently published by the Harpers and consists of plain talks on matters of business. It is a book which almost everyone can read with profit. It is a clear and concise manual, written with commendable fairness. The author refrains from intruding his own opinions, but contents himself with explaining the laws of price, the balance of trade, the employment of gold and silver as standard money, banks and bankers, protection and free trade, capital and labor, strikes, and other matters comprehended in this subject. Price 75 cents. For sale by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.

THE STORY OF MESSIAH, ETC.

The Story of Messiahs and Messianisms for Young Readers, was written by Lucy C. Lillie, and is published by the Harpers. It is a beautiful little work, neatly bound and handsomely illustrated. In this book Mrs. Lillie endeavors to interest and instruct young people in music and in the associations and which great masters have worked. The author's un-failing popularity with young people will be enhanced by this useful and fascinating book. For sale by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago. Price in cloth, $1.00.

JOSEPH, THE PRIME MINISTER.

Some time ago, Dr. W. M. Taylor, of the Broadway Tabernacle, began issuing a series of books on the lives of the old prophets and apostles. They sold rapidly which induced the doctor to write another, whose title is here given. It is also published by the Harpers. It is a fascinating volume, full of thought, and in the skillful expounding of the meaning and the applications of the scripture narratives, it is of great practical value. Sold by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago. Price, $1.50.

GEORGE ELLIOT.

Mrs. Abba Gould Woolson, has written a very valuable work on "George Eliot and her Heroes." Any book written by an author of repute on the life and character of the author of Daniel Deronda is well worth reading. So Mrs. Woolson has made a valuable contribution to the literature on George Eliot. Every one recognizes the slight feeling of impatience with which this or any other volume on the great novelist is opened, lest it should prove to be a small treatise, insufficient to the subject. But we can assure Mrs. Woolson's readers that they will soon dismiss this resentment as they go on to discover how original is this critic's treatment, and how clear her insight. She has furnished a clue by which the third or the thirteenth reading of the novels may be even more enjoyed than the first acquaintance. It is published by the Harpers, and sold by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago. Price $1.25.

VICTORIOUS DEFEAT.

This is a novel by Wolcott Balestier and is published by the Harpers. It is a unique story, admirably written, with spirit, freshness, and strength. The battle and the victory and the defeat are all mental and moral adventures, and there is very subtle ingenuity and power in the study of a curious phase of mental conflict. There is also much grace and prettiness in the story, which is at once thoughtful and picturesque. It is said that "A Victorious Defeat" is the most promising book that has come from the pen of an American author for many years, and that it will create a sensation in the literary world. This is probably too much praise. It is a good novel, however, and is well worth reading. For sale by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago. Price $1.00.

THE LABOR PROBLEM.

This book is made up of a collection of articles which originally appeared in the columns of the "Age of Steel," published at St. Louis. It is a very useful collection of articles on the labor question. Published by the Harpers, and for sale by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago. Price $1.00.

THE AMERICAN SALMON FISHERMAN.

This book is by Harry P. Wells, the well known author of "Fly-Rods and Fly-Tackle." The success of that book has made his name familiar to thousands of American anglers. "The American Salmon Fisherman," like the former work, is the fruit of the author's long experience and thoroughly practical knowledge of this subject. The opening chapter tells how and where salmon fishing may be obtained, and contains a map and list of the salmon rivers in this country and in Canada. It is followed by chapters on rods, reels, the gaff, flies, and casting the fly. The text is illustrated throughout, and the value of Mr. Wells' instructions is enhanced by their minuteness and lucidity, which makes them perfectly comprehensible to the most novice. Published by the Harpers, and for sale by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago. Price, $1.00.

MUST REPORT PROMPTLY.

Five National Banks Fined for Delinquency, and More Coming.

WASHINGTON CITY, Sept. 11.—The comptroller of the currency Friday fined five national banks $100 each for delinquency in reporting to his calls for monthly reports. These banks, the comptroller says, will be fined $100 each for each and every day that they are delinquent in responding to this and future calls. The banks fined have been in default on three preceding calls, and the comptroller has determined to make an example of them by enforcing the law. He made the order imposing the fine at this time, because it is of special importance that the national bank reports shall be sent in promptly in response to the next call, as the September reports are the ones that will be making up his annual report to congress.

Danaham Ahead in This Round.

WASHINGTON CITY, Sept. 11.—Mr. J. F. Manning, of Boston, representing a number of eastern claimants, to whom awards have been made by the Alabama claims court, made an argument before the payment of the awards, holding that Judge Danaham has no jurisdiction over the matter. The comptroller decided that as Mr. Manning was not recognized as an attorney before the court, he was out of the matter altogether. Manning will now seek a hearing before the secretary of the treasury. Warrants in favor of Mr. Manning's eastern claimants amounting to about $1,000,000 are now held up in the treasury department.

TIED OF HIS AFFECTION.

AN ALLEGED CONSPIRACY TO INJECT TRAGEDY INTO ROMANCE.

How Barbara Required Frank's True Love—The Proposed Victim Don't Believe the Story—A Despondent Widow's Awful Escape from the Woes of Living.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—A startling case of the depravity of human nature was just brought to light through the conscientiousness of a man named George Elms, who lives in the Twenty-fifth ward of this city, who appeared before Magistrate Gillespie Thursday and filed an affidavit in which he alleged that about the last of September one Barbara Pressman, equipped with him, William M. Gardner and William Conrad, to kill Frank Glassmire, and that Barbara Pressman attempted to bribe him by offering him the sum of $50,000 to do so.

The details of the case are as follows: About fourteen years ago Frank Glassmire was the accepted suitor for the hand of Barbara Pressman, but through some lovers' quarrel the match was broken off. In the meantime, Barbara married, some years ago her husband died, and since that period Glassmire has been constantly hounding Mrs. Pressman with earnest protestations of his faithfulness, which had evidently become insupportable to the aforesaid lady. George Elms states that he was accosted by Mr. Conrad some time ago, who inquired whether he would like to make some money. On asking him, Conrad told him that he would like him to see a future time, and requested him to call at Mrs. Pressman's residence. Subsequently at a conference at Mrs. Pressman's house, the plot to kill Glassmire was perfected.

At the hearing Friday, Mrs. Pressman was held in $1,000 bail for appearing to murder, and Conrad was held in $500 as an accomplice. Elms was placed under $1,000 bail to appear as witness. Gardner has not yet been apprehended.

Mr. Frank Glassmire, when seen at his shoe store at 330 West Street Friday night, denied all knowledge of Mrs. Barbara Pressman's plot to kill him, and he guessed it was all a humbug. He did not think Mrs. Pressman was the sort of a woman to engage in such an affair.

WEARY OF HER WOES.

Terrible Deed of a Destitute Woman in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Friday afternoon Mrs. Frank Conner, a widow, 25 years of age, residing at 5631 State street, who lost her husband about twelve months ago, committed suicide by taking a dose of corrosive sublimate, first attempting to murder her two children, one aged 2 years and the other 17 months, by dosing them with the poison. The unfortunate woman lived over a saloon, and it has been observed by the neighbors that since her husband's death she has been in a state of great distress. About 3 o'clock Friday afternoon several heavy blows were heard on the floor overhead. The noise being unusual, several men proceeded upstairs to investigate, and looking into the room, they saw through a window, they discovered her lying on the bed with her two children clamped in her arms. The door was forced open, and the woman found in great disorder. On the floor, close to the bed, was an empty bottle, the label on which was marked "Corrosive sublimate." She was conscious, but the two children were not, and she stubbornly refused to take anything to counteract the poison, saying she would die and be with her Frank. When Dr. Hurst arrived, he attempted to administer for her, but she struggled and refused to allow anything to be given to her, once breaking away from those who held her and swallowing a quantity of water. As the poison was fast acting, but she soon passed into a stupor and an hour after her condition became known. Friday night the children were found dead, and there were strong hopes that the mother would recover, but she died in a few minutes. The woman was in a destitute condition.

BROKE HIS PAROLE.

An Ohio Ticket to Leave Man Arrested as a Fugitive from Justice.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—Edward Carlin, who was arrested Wednesday night on information furnished by the superintendent of the Ohio state prison at Columbus, was taken to the city of Philadelphia, where he was committed to the custody of the Ohio authorities. After his commitment Carlin said:

"I am not an escaped convict, and can not be called such. I was a resident of this city until 1874, when I went west. One night a warehouse in Mansfield, where I was employed, took fire and was burned and I was in the place at the time. I was convicted, although my employers tried to secure my release. I was sentenced to one year in prison, and after serving five years, I was paroled on my good behavior. This law was one of Governor Hoadly's pet schemes, and it provides that a convict can be released at the option of the prison commissioners after he has served a certain time. I am not a convict, and I am not a fugitive from justice, and I know I can't be held, for two such cases have already been decided against the state of Ohio."

Lawlessness at Washak, Ind.

WARSAW, Ind., Sept. 11.—Thursday night about twenty well-known young men of this place preceded a band of armed men to La Platte, five miles east, to attend a circus and to loot the town. The crowd had things its own way. The marshal gathered deputies and arrested the boys as they were leaving Friday morning. They were all heavily fined, and in default of payment were brought here, when they were surrounded by their parents and all escaped. The marshal was forced to fly to avoid being mobbed. He was subsequently set upon when alone, and was dangerously wounded. There is much excitement here.

Not a Desirable Position.

WASHINGTON CITY, Sept. 11.—Clubs in the war department are not running over each other to secure the position of disbursing officer, made vacant by the death of Mr. Adams. The bond of $50,000 and responsibility attached with only a salary of $2,000, which other chiefs of branches in the department receive without a cent of responsibility, makes these already comfortably fixed from seeking application.
